Carol is walking down the street at a brisk pace. She stops at an intersection and looks at her phone with a furrowed brow. She starts crossing the intersection going forward before double checking her phone. After a moment of further contemplation, she doubles back and decides to take a left instead. As she is about to step of the curb, she hears a whistle.

Excuse me ma'am but I'm going to have to write you a ticket. You can't just do that at an intersection.

What? Do what?

Change direction! You know how disruptive it is when someone stops in front of you like that? And changes directions? During a street crossing??? Nah uh, there was almost a four person pile up right there. That's a level 2 pedestrian infraction

This week on "Cops NYC".

A woman is sitting at a table. At the table next to her is an unattended laptop.

Officer Nick's busts a laptop watch skimping on her duty.

But I was just going to get more coffee! I can still see the laptop from the line.

Tsk tsk tsk tsk tsk tsk tsk tsk tsk tsk tsk tsk tsk tsk tsk tsk.

INT. SUBWAY TRAIN - NIGHT

A detective is inspecting a pool of liquid on a seat.

NARRATOR (V.O.)
Detective Harris investigates a mysterious liquid.

Harris dips his finger in the liquid and licks it.

DETECTIVE HARRIS
Yep, its piss.

EXT. CITY STREETS - DAY

A couple wearing "I love NY" shirts are walking down the sidewalk. Other pedestrians are passing them on either side. The couple are holding hands and are too distracted by the architecture around them to notice.

NARRATOR (V.O.)
Officer Sanders and Officer Laurens
welcome some tourists.

Two police offices come out of nowhere and tackle the couple.

INT. BOEDEGA - NIGHT

A man is holding up a shop keeper with a gun.

NARRATOR (V.O.)
But first, Patrol officers Amir and Watson respond to a disturbance in Brooklyn.

MAN
WHERE'S THE CAT? I EXPECT A CAT IN A BODEGA!
